On the Ohio River, in Holliday's Cove, in Brooke County, Virginia.

This Estate consists of about 700 Acres of Land, 150 of which is a rich Island, the remainder principally second bottom and upland; that part of the upland which is not tillable, is covered with timber suitable for furnishing the Island and tillable part with fencing and building timber. There is between 150 and 200 acres cleared and under cultivation, a suitable proportion of which in good meadow land. The buildings consist in two log dwelling houses and a log barn with under story of stone. It is well supplied with very fine springs of good water.

The situation of this property on the Ohio River, five miles from the flourishing Town of Steubenville, and in the neighbourhood of several Merchant Mills, Iron Works, &c. renders it a desirable object to a person who would wish to farm extensively, as he would probably at all times find a good market at his door for the produce of his farm. EXTRACTS FROM THE JOURNAL OF A VOYAGE TO THE MEDITERRANEAN.

Chapter I.

Uptorn reluctant from the oozy cave,
The ponderous anchor rises o'er the wave.
FALCONER.

The signal for sailing was hoisted on Sunday morning the 6th of——1815; and all hands moved with alacrity to make the necessary preparations. Pleasure, hope, regret, and care were depicted on every face. There are few who are not willing to exchange indolence for activity---few whom ambition or novelty will not excite; but the ardent son of adventure before he enters on the bright career his hopes have pointed out, must pay a mournful tribute to the friends he must leave, and the pleasures he must resign.

The wharves were covered with spectators, attracted by curiosity or interest to witness our departure; while our decks were crowded with the friends and relations of the officers and men, whose affectionate adieus and honest wishes mingled their soothing notes with the hoarse din of vociferation and bustle. I alone had leisure to gaze on the scene without emotion. My friends—my relations were far distant; and my affections, which were exclusively theirs, slept in my bosom.

"And the spirit becalm'd but remember'd their pow'r,
As the billow the force of the gale that has 'fled."

The claims of politeness were easily fulfilled at a spot where I had no favours to repay, no friendships to acknowledge, and no affections to return:—a few only, the sunshine acquaintanceof a moment, claimed a momentary regret. It is so seldom that my passions sleep at a time of general disturbance, or common sympathy, that I enjoyed with peculiar interest the calm that enabled me to speculate upon those of others. My moment of separation had already passed—and altho' still in my native country, I had for some time been deprived of the comforts of home, a stranger to kindness, and a wanderer from the caresses of my friends.

At two o'clock, the captain gave orders to "get under way;" we proceeded under easy sail out of the harbour and having discharged our pilot, the canvass wings that remained unfurled, were all expanded to catch the friendly breeze which now bore us rapidly down the bay. The town, sinking gradually from our sight, appeared but as a confused heap in the perspective, and at last faded to a diminutive speck which soon sunk in the horizon. The sun too set about the same time, and twilight shutting the land from our view, left us completely desolate, deprived at once of our country, and of the light of Heaven!

The night was clear and the wind which still continued to blow strong, caused a considerable sea. About eight o'clock in the evening, Cape Cod light-house appeared on our starboard beam about fifteen miles distant, which we soon lost, steering away East by South I beheld the last rays that glimmered from the light-house with emotions similar to those which must have impressed the parents of our race when they first saw the glorious sun sink in the horizon——the last vestige of my country was sinking, perhaps forever from my view. That little light contained at once, friends, country, home,--and "the bosom friend dearer than all," and love, affection and regret each struggled in the sigh that bade it farewell. It sunk—but as the cheerful sun is sent by a merciful Providence to irradiate a sunless night, adventure, hope, glory, rose upon the benighted mind to cheer its desolation.

CHAPTER II.

"None of your half laughs and Purser's grins."
SEA PHRASE.

7. The next morning proved to be fine & a favourable wind was carrying us fast towards our destination.

The prospect was novel and sublime.--There was something charming in the idea of being able to cast the eye around on all sides without obstruction, and of inhaling a free and untainted atmosphere. But it was a charm that soon ceased to operate—the feet are as fond of wandering as the eye, and the mind must inhale refreshment as well as the body. "The boundless ocean roaring wide" ceased to afford interest as soon as the suggestion arose that it was to be enjoyed at the expense of exile and imprisonment. No one loves the food to which he is forced, or the spot to which he is confined. There was besides no interest in the scene after it was once viewed —& there was but little pleasure in the anticipation of seeing salt water, and eating salt pork by the month.

Among our crew were several landsmen and boys who now began to pay to Neptune the usual tribute, to the infinite amusement of the sailors who indulged in a great variety of coarse jokes on the occasion. Even some who had been at sea before were affected with sea sickness. As I was the only officer on board likely to be placed in this disagreeable situation, and as sailors take a particular delight in seeing soldiers placed in a ludicrous point of view, I was regarded with much scrutiny as an object likely to afford considerable amusement. The officers seemed to feel a peculiar interest for me, which they evinced by frequent enquiries as to how I felt. I allowed them to enjoy their "half laughs," and determined if possible to frustrate their anticipated mirth by concealing any nausia that I might feel. I escaped however without any other disagreeable sensation than a dizziness occasioned by the motion of the vessel; and my companions although disappointed in their expectations of amusing themselves at the expense of a "soldier adrift," were I believe sincere in the friendly congratulations with which they greeted me.

During the night the wind continued rising until it blew very strong, the motion of the vessel was considerably increased, and her decks covered with water.

Aug. 8. The next morning the wind began to die away, and in the afternoon it became perfectly calm. This is one of the most disagreeable circumstances which occur at sea, and is particularly so when the ocean has been agitated by a heavy wind. While there is sufficient wind to fill the sails, the vessel is kept steady; and impelled forward by the breeze rides over the wave with an uniform motion, by no mean disagreeable. But when the canvass is no longer filled and the helm becomes useless, the vessel falls into the trough of the sea and rolls from side to side with a tremenduous motion. "Now for it, soldier!" said one of the Lieutenants, and again I became the object of anticipated amusement —for of all the freaks of old Neptune, a calm creates the most disgust in a young voyager. I do not know how it happened —but I still escaped and laughed in my turn at the disappointed expectations of my companions. I certainly however experienced a disagreeable sensation. The constant motion of the vessel, and the tossing of the waves in every direction, without having any permanent object to relieve the eye, caused a feeling which a favorite author of mine would have termed a hallucination of the brain. I felt giddy---my head whirled and my brain was confused—while this lasted which was for several days I could neither read, write nor enjoy myself. I still however was in good spirits and made myself quite at home; so that my companions in misery,---for I can call the inmates of a ship no other--observed "that although no sailor, I was an old man-o'wars-man." I had been at camp, and could eat salt junk, drink dirty water, or nestle composedly in a thick settlement of bed-bugs, as well as the best of them.

DEVIL'S HOLE.

We have been politely favoured with the following extract of a letter from an officer in the United States' army, dated Fort Niagara, September 27: [R. I. American.

"I made an excursion, not long since, in company with three other gentlemen, to a place called the Devil's Hole. It is a huge chasm in the bank of the river three miles below the falls. The height of the bank at this place is estimated at near 300 feet from the surface of the river, and is composed chiefly of layers of limestone. In this bank, a gap extending from the border of the river about 200 yards into the country and of various width, from 20 to 600 yards, appears as if dug out by human labour. Its walls or sides are either perpendicular or shelving over, but in no place sloping—so that on looking over the brink, you would suppose a person at the bottom could have but small hopes of ever arriving upon the surface of the earth again. No outlet appears but that of the river, and that offers only the last consolation to misery—death. But fear and astonishment deform objects. After the first impressions have subsided, and the dizziness caused from looking down from such a height, has left the head steady, the view is of a different character. At the upper extremity, towards the country, the perpendicular descent is not more than 40 or 50 feet, after which the angle of the slope to the river side is about 45 degrees. In a field at the distance of 4 or 500 yards from this point, a small brook suddenly leaves its course and sinks into the earth, and is seen no more till it emerges in foam and bubbles in the centre of the Devil's Hole, from whence it pursues a rough precipitous channel into the Niagara.

A deed of horror was acted at the Devil's Hole of which it was a proper theatre.—Tradition tells the story and ascribes to that the origin of its name. On a certain night during the last French war, as a party of Englishmen were going from the head to the foot of the portage, with waggons loaded with merchandise and under an escort of soldiers, a party of Indians in alliance with the French sprang from a ravine just in rear of the Devil's Hole, where they had lain in ambush, and cut them off from retreat in every direction but into the Hole. The dreadful yell breaking upon the still gloom of midnight, and resounding through the dark cavern and the forest, announced their fate, and was alone sufficient to deprive them of all power of resistance.---They surrendered therefore without a struggle, expecting the tomahawk soon to put an end to their terrors and their existence.—But no--they were mistaken. The Savage seems here to have risen above himself in horrors.--They conducted their victims to the edge of a cliff which hangs over the Devil's Hole, and with one sweep plunged them all into the profound abyss. Men, beasts, and waggons, all fell together, and were dashed to pieces on the bottom, except one man who escaped in a most extraordinary manner by lodging in the branch of a tree growing near the precipice. He is said to be living now somewhere in this state.

There may be some exaggeration in this story, but I give the facts as I received them.---In evidence of the truth of the story, there have pieces of iron belonging to a waggon been found on the spot where they fell. Travellers who have visited the falls, have, heretofore, looked into the Devil's Hole and retired, without indulging their curiosity further, but several of the inhabitants in the vicinity had ventured down before we understook to explore it. We effected our descent without much hazard, but not being prepared with tools and labourers to dig for remains, we merely passed through to the river, and returned. The view of the river at this spot is really terrifick.--It rolls and tumbles along with inconceivable force, dashing against its rugged banks and roaring like a hurricane. In some places it piles itself into huge waves which tumble into foam and are succeeded by others. Upon the whole, I think this scene, including the immense piles of rocks which bound it on every side, must be one of the most sublime that nature affords, the falls only excepted. Large cakes of ice are found among the rocks along the rivulet that runs through the Devil's Hole, at all times of the year. The banks of this river for the extent of 12 miles are one continuation of natural wonders, of which the falls and the Devil's Hole, are principal."

Proposals are issued by Mr. Jonathan Elliot, the publisher of the Washington City Weekly Gazette, for the publication of a Daily Paper, and a paper three times a week, under the title of "The City of Washington Gazette," to commence the present month. The object of the publisher, avowedly, is "to give an accurate daily report of the proceedings of the national legislature," including of course, both houses. If this task shall be well and faithfully performed, he will have a strong claim to the patronage of the country. A paper, which should furnish the nation with the daily proceedings of Congress, without favour or partiality to any political section, or to party principles, has long been wanted. We wish it may be supplied, in the present instance.

From an English Paper.

Cobbett has began to republish his Register in London, from MS. which he sends from America. The last number contains the following scandalous & insulting threat to his Creditors:

"I hereby publicly give notice to every person with whom I may have any pecuniary engagements, that if they proceed to any acts of legal malice; if they give any obstruction to the performance of any thing that may be to my advantage, and that may tend to alleviate in some small degree, the blow which the Borough mongers have given me in a pecuniary way; I hereby solemnly give notice to all such persons, be they who they may, that I will not only never pay them a farthing, if I should have heaps of money, but that, on the contrary, I shall consider them as aiders and abettors of the Borough mongers, and that whenever the day of justice shall arrive, I will act toward them accordingly!"

A private letter from Paris draws a curious picture of the state of the public mind in some of the French Departments. A sudden change of sentiment has been effected on religious subjects, it appears by the well meaning, but perhaps ever zealous exertions, of a mere handful of Catholic Missionaries. They have, it seems, selected for their experiments the districts which 20 years ago, were most affected with the maniacal principles of the Revolution. Around Nantz and Bordeaux nothing now attracts so much the attention of the traveller as the daily pilgrimages of repentant and converted Atheists to crosses erected by themselves to expiate their former crimes against Religion. The exertions of these Missionaries are certainly praisworthy, and we have no doubt will contribute towards that reformation in morals, which we trust is gradually spreading among the French people.

PITTSBURGH.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1817.

"Nothing if not critical"—is a very severe and very true remark applied to the generality of periodical literary publications. It is so agreeable to the pride and indolence of learning, for authors to overlook one another by mounting occasionally on each others backs, which is an elevation to be easily attained withal, that, at last, we shall probably meet with nothing but views, reviews and reviewers reviewed; with here and there a specimen of half starved and half frightned genius, led forth the martyr of self-reliance and originality.

If a condition of things more primitive may be expected to exist here; and if, as most intelligent travellers agree, we of the cis-montane regions are a more reading people than the inhabitants of the Atlantic cities, it is probable that some genuine indigenous literature might be cultivated and cherished amongst us. We shall in future attend sedulously to the duty of eliciting whatever of native talent this portion of our country may possess; for which purpose, it has long been in contemplation to allow instructive and moral amusement larger claims in our paper than have hitherto been admissible. Among other things, we have reserved for this return of political peace, a series of extracts from the journal of a voyage to the Mediterranean, with which the ingenious author has been so obliging as to furnish us. We are much mistaken, either in regard to the merit of the performance or the taste of the public, if the sprightly narrative be not generally interesting. We would have earlier availed ourselves of the privilege of publishing it, but amidst the clamour of deaf and noisy partisans the voice of taste and fancy could not well have been heard. The outpourings of the muse, locked up and frozen in the soul, like the music of Maunchausen's Lapland trumpet, may now find here a genial serenading hour, after concord has poured her oil upon the restless waves of the multitude. In such halcyon days as these, haply shall genius—for us though not to us—glide down like Iris from heaven, streaming the rays of her glory athwart the gloom of the storm which has gone by. In the Gilead of literature there is balm to bind up the poisoned wounds which party malice has so inexorably inflicted amongst us.

At a meeting of a number of the young men of this city, held on Tuesday evening, for the purpose of forming an association auxiliary to the American Bible Society of New-York, Harmar Denny, was chosen chairman, and Samuel Allen, Secretary.

On motion, Messrs Allen. Wilson, Fielding, Lambdin and Minis, were appointed a committee to draft a constitution for the government of the society. After some consultation, the committee reported the plan of a constitution, embracing the general principles laid down in that of the American Bible Society of New-York.

The constitution having been read and amended in some few particulars, was unanimously adopted.

A committee consisting of the Rev. Mr. Campbell, Mr. Minis, Doughty, Lambdin, Bell, Wilson, M'Kee, Belden, Stockman, Selden, Allen and Denny, were appointed to obtain subscribers to the constitution and make the necessary arangements preparatory to the first general meeting.

On motion resolved, that an address be delivered at the first general meeting to be holden on Tuesday evening next, in the court-house.

HARMAR DENNY, Chairman

Samuel Allen, Sec.

Severe Gale. On Tuesday last, (says the Buffalo Gazette of October 14,) a most violent gale was experienced on Lake Erie; the water rose several feet and inundated the whole flats on Buffalo creek; several vessels were driven down the rapids; and considerable damage was done to property lying on the beach of Lake Erie, and on the margin of Buffalo creek; and all the shipping suffered more or less injury.

The Connecticut Mirror of the 20th inst. observes, "Should we judge from what we have seen of the debates in the House of Representatives, we should say that the majority are in a sad predicament, & appear as bewildered as a cat in a strange garret.' They have gone there, but how, and for what purpose they cannot tell. There is no regularity or system obverved in their debates—therefore it is not strange that some cry one thing & some another, & not the one half know wherefore they have come together. Verily the spirit of reform has made them mad.

FROM EUROPE.

Accounts are brought down to the 12th September. As usual, of late, we scarcely find a REAL EVENT worthy prominent notice. PEACE AND PLENTY appear diffused throughout Christendom; and, in addition, all subjects of controversy between the TURKS and Russians have been amicably adjusted. In ENGLAND they were hailing the return of active business. Some wiseacres, however, predict a speedy storm after so short a calm.

Of the last exploded European ALARM BUBBLES, one was, an insurrection at LYONS, which ended in smoke; and another, the reappearance of a son of LOUIS 16th to claim the throne of his father; who turned out to be maniac, and is confined in an asylum at Rouen. [Bost. Cent.

Mr. Gallatin.—Sometime ago, we copied a paragraph from the Baltimore Federal Gazette, stating, that Mr. Gallatin was much dissatisfied with the treatment he receives from the French Government, and was desirous of returning home. The Editor of the National Intelligencer, in noticing the paragraph, said that HE had no such information on the subject. In allusion to the article in the National Intelligencer, the Federal Gazette of Wednesday last, thus remarks—"Further and repeated information from Washington confirms the statement contained in the extract which was published in the Gazette sometime since, as to the treatment experienced by Mr. Gallatin in Paris, from the French Ministry. Although the editors of the Intelligencer have no information on the subject, there is no doubt that the reports stated in the extract above mentioned, circulate in Washington, and are generally believed." [N. Y. Spec.

It is interesting to trace the steps of our fellow men, of whatever rank or character, through extraordinary adventures, perils or sufferings. Capt. Page, who was lately in the ship Indus, of this port, at Nooahevah in the south sea, the scene of capt. Porter's warfare with the Typees, has related to us the following distressing account:—That at that place five of capt. Porter's men stole a boat, and deserted, probably intending to harbor about among by-places, till the departure of the American expedition should enable them to return and take up their abode for a time with the natives. But whatever might be their plan, it was soon overthrown by an act of Providence. They proceeded first to a small island or cluster of bare rocks called the Hergest rocks, their heads just peeping above water, and which produced no edible substance for man or beast: this however, they concluded to make their resting place for the night, and accordingly anchored, and went ashore to sleep; but before morning a wind arose, which dashed their boat to pieces against the rocks, leaving them no means of return. Here they then were obliged to remain, and endeavour to live as it were upon nothing: one of them after a while attempted to swim towards Nooahevah, but was soon devoured by the sharks: three others successively perished; but the fifth (whose name was Thompson) made out to subsist chiefly upon the flesh and blood of such birds as he could kill, lighting upon the rocks, and upon the dripping water caught in the skull of one of his deceased comrades, which he used as a vessel for that purpose, for about eight months, when he was discovered by a passing vessel, by which he was taken off, and carried to Nooahevah, a picture of famine and despair. Here he remained till his health and strength were repaired, when, about a year since, he shipped on board the brig Russel, capt. Almy, of New Bedford, for Canton, but which has not been heard of since her departure from Nooahevah, and is considered as lost, and all her crew unfortunately to have perished.

Another of capt, Porter's men, by the name of Ayres, was relieved by capt. Page, in his last voyage. He was one of those who jumped overboard and swam ashore, to avoid being taken prisoners at the capture of the frigate Essex. These it will be recollected, capt. Hillyar refused to receive as prisoners and sent home in the cartel with those taken in the ship. Ayres therefore remained at Valparaiso and when the royalists afterwards became masters of the place, was taken up and confined in the castle, where he continued a prisoner till March, 1816, when capt. Page, being at that place, through compassion received him on board and brought him home. Ayres was a young man, belonging to Philadelphia, where he had served his time at the hatting business: he was a private of marines with capt. Porter, and this extensive cruize was the first of his ever having been at sea.

Among the symptoms attending worms, are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums, itching in the nose, and about the seat; convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite, sometimes loathing food, & sometimes voracious, purging, with slimy and foetid stools; vomiting, large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach, pains in the head and thighs with lowness of spirits; slow fever, with small and irregular pulse, a dry cough excessive thirst, sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face bloated and flushed

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms, should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success, in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during the warm season, will effectually prevent "the vomiting and purging of children" a dreadful disorder, which annually destroys thousands of the infant part of our citizens. It is likewise the mildest and most certain remedy known, and has restored to health and strength a great number when in advanced stage of this fatal complaint.—Particular and plain instructions are given for every part of the necessary treatment in such cases.

PHILIPSBURG.

The Subscriber having agreed with JAMES ROSS, Esq. of Pittsburgh, for the purchase of his real property, on the west bank of the Ohio River, opposite WELLSBURG, will offer for SALE, on the Second Monday in November next, the

Lots in said TOWN,

By him laid out upon the Premises.

The Terms of Sale will be as follows, viz.

PAYMENT to be made in three equal annual instalments from the time of Sale, without interest, with an allowance of a discount of eight per cent for prompt payment—bond with good personal security to be given by the purchaser, payable to the proprietor's agent, Thomas Johnston, in the Old Bank of Steubenville, or in some convenient Bank on the western waters, which may be hereafter named for that purpose.

Upon receiving payment for any Lot or Lots sold, Mr. Ross will execute conveyances for the same of a good and indisputable estate—for this purpose the conveyances will be deposited in the Bank, to be taken away by the purchaser upon making his payments.

The right of having or keeping a FERRY, will be reserved to the proprietor.

It is believed that no property of the kind has been offered for sale upon the western waters possessing more natural or accidental advantages. It is situated on the bank of Ohio, opposite Wellsburgh, in the centre of perhaps the richest and best improved body of lands within several hundred miles of it; in a healthy climate, and in the vicinity of towns that have flourished, and are now flourishing, but in which unimproved property is holden at so high a price, as to prevent the lower, and most useful classes of society from holding.

WELLSBURGH has long been the largest exporting town within a great distance, of articles the growth of the country. The settlement is filled with Mills and Mill-seats, abounds with Coal and excellent Water. The Town offered for sale can be supplied in the dryest season, with spring water of the first quality, sufficient for the population of a large city.

A public road is now laying out from the city of Pittsburgh direct to this place, which it is believed will furnish the shortest route from that city to Smithfield, through Cadiz and Cambridge to Zanesville, and also through Mountpleasant to Zanesville.

An act of incorporation has passed the Assembly of Virginia, for Turnpiking both that road, and another to Washington, to go into effect when the Assembly of Pennsylvania shall pass similar laws. No doubt is entertained that the road from Washington will be provided for at the next session, and the work commenced in the ensuing year. These roads will make Wellsburgh and the New Town the principal thoroughfare of travelling from east to west, and from west to east, connected as they will be with the eastern and northern states through Pittsburgh, and with the middle states by the great Cumberland road at Washington.

Persons desiring to purchase property in the proposed Town, would do well to remember the success of those who, at the time of their respective establishments, purchased town property in Steubenville, Smithfield, Cadiz, &c. Such has been the rise in value of the property. It cannot be doubted that the same success will attend those who may purchase in the town now proposed for sale.

The articles of agreement between the subscriber and Mr. Ross, will be shewn on the day of sale and the particular terms of public sale be more clearly stated by the Agent.
